CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 222 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.5in. An excerpt from The Independent and the Weekly Review, Volume 108: IF readers who are lucky enough to possess a copy of the new edition of The House of Souls (Knopf) by Arthur Machen will turn past the middle of the volume and read the story called The Great God Pan, they will find the work of this remarkable writer at its best, and can know whether they like it or not. Some critics, especially those who despise a story with a plot, may prefer the two first items in the book: A Fragment of Life and The White People. Arthur Machens work has always pleased most of the critics; he deserves popularity, and for that reason I am sorry that The Great God Pan does not stand at the beginning of this volume. The other two stories they be (there is a fourth, called The Inmost Light) have much of his strange beauty, mysticism, and weird, diabolical power of suggestion, but they may discourage the average reader. The White People a wonderful thing runs for nearly forty pages with only two...
