FBC LTD, 2017. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Foreign Agriculture Circular: February-December, 1963 The severe weather was also one of the principal factors contributing to the decline in milk production in the Netherlands. The weather also led indirectly to heavy slaughter of milk cows forcing it upon many small farmers who ran into financial difficulties and increased feeding costs. In the United Kingdom, the coldest winter in many years and a slight decline in cow numbers resulted in a decline in milk production. In Australia and New Zealand, conditions for dairying were generally favorable and production increased. Canada s production in the first half of 1963 showed little change from comparable 1962. In the United States, it was down slightly from the earlier year. Creamery butter output declined 2 percent. In Western Europe, production was at approximately the 1962 level, mostly because of the heavier outturn in West Germany and France, the largest producing countries in that area. In most of the other Western European dairying countries, namely those where milk production was down, milk for butter-making was in short supply. Among these were Denmark, the Netherlands...
