New Kru Town is known as one of the worst places to live in Monrovia, Liberia. The neighborhood, also called Saigon, doesn't welcome outsiders. There are unspoken codes and rules for every action. Fights are one of the most common sights in the town, and no police officer will venture into the area. Brown and Jimmy are growing up in New Kru Town. The two boys are best friends and give each other the confidence to go after their heart's desires. For Brown, that is the beautiful Mammie. He falls in love with her but doesn't realize that she is leading a secret life. Jimmy thinks that there is only room in his life for one passion, and he's not going to waste his time on a woman. Instead, soccer is his true love. Jimmy tries to fulfill his dream of becoming a professional soccer player. His relationships with women are always casual, until he meets someone special. Wilmot Nah Adekoya, PhD, has woven a tale of true love and big dreams in New Kru Town. Readers will find themselves laughing and hoping alongside his two protagonists as they yearn for something more out of life.
