Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Results of Geological Survey Investigation at Pinnacles National Monument, Paicines, California This report summarizes the results of the geological survey conducted at the Pinnacles National Monument during July and August 1993 under contract with the National Park Service. The objective of the investigation was to: a) conduct a geologic investigation of the area immediately east of Chalone Creek, from the confluence of Chalone Creek and Bear Creek northward; and b) identify the location and dip of the Chalone Creek Fault within and upstream of the confluence of these creeks. Results of this study will be used to evaluate potential test well drilling sites east of the Chalone Creek Fault. The scope of the work included: compilation and review of previous geological and hydrogeological reports, maps and data; study and interpretation of aerial photography; geological inspection of outcrops in the field; selection of a location to perform a geophysical survey; selection of the most appropriate geophysical survey method to locate the Chalone fault; performing a refraction geophysical profile across the fault trace area; and, preparation of this report. The level of field investigation was reconnaissance in nature, except for the geophysical profile, which was conducted to an advanced degree of detail.
