Excerpt: . a more profitable, and at the same time sound investment, for so large a sum as that. Should you, however, allow your 150Z. to remain in the Post Office Savings Bank, you must send up your book to the head office every year, when the interest due will be added, until the whole amounts to 2001., after which time it will cease to bear interest, but will of course be perfectly safe, though so long as it remains there it will be quite useless to you. When you wish to withdraw money you must go to a Post Office Savings Bank and ask for a notice of withdrawal. You will have nothing to pay for this, and having filled it up with the amount you wish to withdraw, and signed your name to it, you must fold and post it to The Comptroller of the Post Office, Savings Bank Department, London, whose address you will find printed on the paper in such a way that when the latter is properly folded it will look like a letter with a printed address. You will have no postage to pay for it, and in a day or two you will receive from London a paper, authorising the postmaster at the office indicated by yourself to pay you the sum you wish to withdraw. All you have to do then is to take your bank book and this paper to the post office in question, sign a...
