Eavesdropping: Loretta Young Talks about her Movie Years

By Mr Edward J Funk

Edward Funk. Paperback. Condition: New. 358 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.9in. This book is composed of Loretta Youngs 1990 conversations with me (Edward Funk) about her movie years. In the concurrent new book, Behind the Door: the Real Life of Loretta Young, I delve into a select few of Loretta Youngs ninety-eight films; enough to know she was a major movie star and her battles to get there and remain for the next twenty-five years. Yet, Loretta and I had discussed ninety-one of her films and that left so much material behind. Since 1990, voices able to recall a career from the silent era, through the golden years of film, have been extinguished. Loretta isnt just any voice; she tells us from an Academy Award winning stars perspective. She discusses the actors, the directors, the producers, the clothes (and more clothes!), what she learned about acting, her innumerable crushes on her leading men, her reputation as being difficult, the roles she wanted, the roles she didnt. Its eighty thousand words of memories, a discussion of which, hopefully, classic film buffs will enjoy eavesdropping. Excerpts: When the camera rolled, he (jimmy Cagney) was in character; there was no getting around...
