Excerpt from Health Activities in Colleges and Universities: A Discussion of the Aims, Organizations, Activities, and Problems of a Students Health Service A very significant trend in education during the past few years is shown in the recognition that health is fundamental to sound intellectual development and that the rigid regulation of all things pertaining to the hygiene of students is indispensable. Generally speaking, there is serious economic and academic loss year after year in our schools, colleges, and universities, due to lassitude, indisposition, illness, and epidemics among students, all more or less preventable. For many years universities have inquired into and passed regulations respecting the conduct and habits of students with a view to maintaining and increasing mental efficiency. The university has said to the student: You must not dissipate. You must not indulge in frequent and late hours of social activities. You must not do this or that which interferes with your studies. No serious or worthy objections have been voiced against the assumption by the university of the authority to enforce such regulations. With a realization of the importance of health and the advance in preventive medicine, the universities see that by special measures for safeguarding the health of their students one of the chief roots of academic loss and inefficiency is reached. Who can justly question, then, the authority of a university to make provisions for service of this kind? With a view of providing an agency to deal with the problem of students health, many colleges and universities have established, or anticipate establishing, a students health service. In order to support such an activity, the student is required to pay an annual health fee. Naturally there...
