Forgotten Books, 2018. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Federal and State Military Organizations In the border States numerous state militia and home-guard organizations were maintained. This was notably so in Missouri and Kentucky, States in which many raids and invasions by the enemy occurred. West Virginia maintained a body of militia, as also did Indiana, and they were called into service hi times of various emergencies, especially in cavalry raids made by the enemy into loyal territory; and other States called into their service emergency troops at various critical times, their service being rendered in part in defense of the States wherein organized and in part in defense of the interests of the Federal Government. In the border States the militia and home guards were frequently engaged in most terrible warfare, and their services in many in stances in the protection of their own and the adjacent territory from assaults of guerrillas was rendered under conditions which tested to the utmost their faith in and loyalty to the General Government. The following, taken from William F. Fox s Regimental Losses in the American Civil War, pages 536-537, is to an extent descriptive of the loyalty of the people of the border States: While the more northern States were confronted with the questions of a war, the border States had to deal with the additional and more serious ones arising from a civil war - a strife in which brother would be arrayed against brother, neighbor against neighbor, and which would be characterized by all the terrible and distracting scenes engendered by such a contest. They were slave-holding States, but they resisted all importunities to join the Confederacy, and remained loyal to the Union, although they knew full well that such...
