Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from A Digest of Industrial Waste Treatment It seems appropriate to add that designing engineers or industrial managements quite often propose the utilization of novel methods for the solution of waste water problems and that in general, if the proposed methods appear to be based on sound principles, it is proper to recommend the issuance of a permit containing a condition to the effect that the installation shall be regarded as experimental with final approval dependent on the results attained in actual performance. Before plunging into consideration of specific wastes, it will be well to review the qualities of industrial wastes which are ordinarily recognized as objectionable. These are: putrescibility, acidity or causticity, toxicity, color, taste, odor, settleable solids, turbidity and Oil. The proper consideration of these factors will include their effect on public health, animal or aquatic life, water works for domestic or industrial consumption and recreation.
