The Turks dye their beards a very fine rich brown or black by means of a metal found in the East, said to be iron pyrites, but that is doubtful. I think it is an alloy of iron and copper in a state of oxide. They use for a mordant roasted Aleppo galls with some henna, and mixed with starch. In dyeing the beard they first mix up the gall powder into a paste with water, and thoroughly rub it into the beard, letting it dry, and if wanted jet black it is necessary to repeat this application, taking care not to get it on the skin. After the lapse of some hours the metal dye is treated in the same way, and gently rubbed into the beard, when a fine color is produced, according to the quantity used or the length of time used in its application. After this operation henna is sometimes applied to give a richer hue and soften the beard. Vegetable Hair Dye. Pyrogallic acid. 1 ounce. Warm water. 6 This dye is applied daily for about a week, and turns the hair a brownish or reddish hue. German Vegetable Hair Dye Is a strong tincture of the green walnut hulls scented, and will stain some hair a rich brown hue. As the most of these dyes are chemical, it is necessary to give a word of caution to those who prepare and to those who use them....
