Excerpt from Lessons on Form: Or, an Introduction to Geometry, as Given in a Pestalozzian School, Cheam, Surrey Bacon has made an observation to this effect that a man really possesses only that knowledge, which he in some sort creates for himself. To apply to intellectual instruction the principle implied in these words was the aim of Pestalozzi. It is a principle admitting of various degrees, as well as modes of application, in the different branches of human knowledge; but in no one can it be more extensively applied than in Geometry. That science is peculiarly the creation of the human mind, in which, independent of external nature, and complete in its own resources, it builds up the solid but airy fabric of its abstractions. It needs no laboratory to test its conclusions, no observatory to obtain data for its calculations; rendering aid to other sciences, it asks none for itself.
