Twice he looked back, but his retreat was hopelessly cut off. Once inside the dressing-room, he stood before a mirror long enough to quell his nervousness a little. Oh, Sue Wiltsinger! You do look too sweet! The Freshman wheeled, and the speaker caught his hands with an effusive little cry. He was a slender youth, the speaker, very young looking, and his cap did not quite conceal something queer about his head. You must have the first dance with me. Goodness! How cold your hands are! In truth, the Freshmans knees were shaking. But he walked off in tow of the effusive youth, because he did not know what else to do, and in the interval it dawned upon him that this was Madeline Hayes, a friend of his sisters who lived in Palo Alto. He was just hugging himself with delight at the turn things were taking, when Miss Hayes suddenly turned and eyed him sharply. Why, the girls said you had to go to San Francisco this morning. I--I--got back in time, you see, equivocated the Freshman, falteringly. Here, lets sit down. Im feeling a little tired. They sat on a couch on the stairway-landing opposite the parlor doors, and looked at the crowd some minutes in silence. The Freshman forgot his tremors, and his heart swelled. The beauty of Stanford was there--and what was not beauty was brought up to the standard by artificial means, with a license permissible only at...
