This pdf may be really worth a read, and superior to other. It generally does not price too much. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

Table 92.--Wood for Saddles and Haruess, year ending Jnne, 1912. GATES AND FENCING. Table 93 lists seven woods used in Pennsylvania for fence pickets and gates, both farm gates and those used for the enclosure of front yards and lawns. White cedar, shipped in from the Carolinas, stands first as to quantity and in no other industry was it the principal wood. Its durability in exposed situations especially commends it for this use. Spruce is listed in the table in large quantities and the fact that it was preferred to several Stategrown woods that could prohably have been obtained cheaper and known to be more durable, is worthy of note. The durable properties of cypress, together with its strength, favor it also as an excellent wood for gate and fencing material. That cypress is demanded for the best lines of work of this character is seen from the fact that it is the only wood reported by raiiroads for erossing gates. In the lower grades it is popular for lawn fence pickets, for which use it serves with chestnut and white pine. Stubs, the wooden parts of patent woven wire fencing, called for chestnut and white cedar. Though white cedar was used in larger quantities, yet chestnut, because it is cheaper and at the same time possesses lasting qualities for outdoor uses, is destined to grow in favor for...
