Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.In TWO MILES WEST, imagination, memory, and dream entwine to create voices that leap metaphysical boundaries. Entsminger asks us to suppose a time space lattice / imposed by a mind / composing images. In the realm of poetry, where an image in the mind s eye is as alive as a warm body, he explores the nature of knowledge. Endearing characters dance to the beat: Carisha in tawny hay fields, shirtless rain-soaked boys, a wanna-be western outlaw, pelicans disguised as lady s slippers, Bach composing on a supernatural plane, a gangling bald Russian professor, and a three-year-old boy s vision of Grandma in full-cut apron / hugging her wide hips / canvas shoes to ease / sore feet smell of / onions and fried potatoes. Individuals try to connect: faces trapped in wood grains, toes wiggle out to dance / teasing his stockings / bringing his fleet full stop / he lights a smile, young men following a trail round the hillside, a friend they pick up in a bar pushing imaginary buttons / that fumble under fingers, and persistent Handpick McQ...
