Cornford Press. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 684 pages. Dimensions: 8.6in. x 5.6in. x 1.7in. Thy asked Orsino, without a smile. It would be as sensible to say that a man who had never seen Borne particular thing, about which he has heard much, might as well put out his eyes. The young priest laughed again, took up the cigar he had laid upon the edge of the piano, puffed at it till it burned freely, and then struck two or three chords of a modulation. A sheet of ruled paper on which several staves of music were roughly jotted down in pencil stood on the rack of the instrument. Oraino stretched out his long legs, leaned back in his low chair, and stared at the old gilded rosettes in the square divisions of the carved ceiling. He was a discontented man, and knew it, which made his discontent a matter for self-reproach, especially as it was quite clear to him that the cause of it lay in himself. He had made two great mistakes at the beginning of life, Wen barely of age, and though neither of them had ultimately produced any serious material consequences, they had affected his naturally melancholic temper and had brought out his inherited hardness of disposition. At the time of the peat building speculationls in Rome, several pars earlier, he bad fbolishly involved himself with his fathers old enemy, Ugo del Ferice, and had found himself at last altogether in the latters power, though not in reality his debtor. At the same time, he had fallen very much in love with a. young widow, who, loving him very sincerely ia her turn, but believing, for many reasons, that if she married him she would be doing him an irreparable injury, had sacrificed herself by marrying...
