The minimum standards presented in this report are issued as preliminary guides to good practice for those engaged in the drilling of wells and to assist cities and counties in California in the regulation of water well construction. Countries and cities which have not already done so, are encouraged to enact water well construction ordinances to protect the quality of ground water supplies in their areas. After sufficient time has elapsed so that interested state and local agencies and members of the water well drilling industry may consider and comment upon the recommended standards presented in this report, the Department of Water Resources will conduct hearings prior to issuing these standards in final form. This procedure should take approximately two years. During these hearings, it would be appropriate to consider amendments to Section 7076 of the Water Code. This report has been developed after consultation with the State Department of Public Health, Bureau of Sanitary Engineering. A set of tentative public health standards of well construction has also been in the process of development jointly by the State Department of Public Health and the California Conference of Local Health Officers. These proposed standards, now being used by some local health departments on a trial basis, are appended to this report.
