Book One is intended for the first five grades; Book Two is arranged for Grades Six, Seven, and Eight. Books One and Two are combined in a complete edition, to which this preface relates. Children do not learn to Spell through merely repeating in order the letters which make up words. Some children misspell because their pronunciation is slovenly. They do not hear the correct sound of the word. They must learn to hear truly. Others misspell because they do not clearly visualize the form of the word. They must be taught to give energetic attention to the printed form to see clearly. But even then children fail to Spell correctly if they are completely ignorant of the phonetic value of the letters which make up the word. There is no remedy for...
