Margaret overdressed, is sitting reading a magazine. She looks up impatiently and throws it down in disgust.) Margaret - (crossly.) There s no use in my trying to read or do anything else when I m so provoked. I don t see why dad can t (the bell rings) Oh, drat that bell! I don t want to see any person. I wish people would stay at home. (Goes and looks out.) Oh! it s Helen! I wonder what she wants now. She is always running over and I m sure I m never over there any more than four times a day at the most. (Helen comes in and Margaret rushes to embrace her.) Oh Helen, you dear girl! I m so glad to see you. I was just wishing you would come over. Do take off your hat and stay awhile. I ve just been so mad I could boil over or bite somebody or do something awful. Helen - Why, what is the matter with you? What are you mad about? (Aside, It seems to me she is always in hot water or a stew about something.) Margaret - Well, sit down and I ll tell you about it. (They sit down on a couch.) It seems that dad has some country relations somewhere in the backwoods. He s had them ever since he was born but he s just remembering them now. Well, it seems that there s a girl about my age and dad was looking over some old photos last night and came...
