Excerpt from A Study of the Sensory and Sensory-Motor Disturbances Associated With Insanity, From a Biological and Physiological Standpoint I am aware that this paper is composed almost entirely of general statements, with little elaboration; but the limitation of time and the general character of the subject has made this necessary, lest from insufficient elaboration some parts of the argument might lose their due weight, while any attempt at discursiveness would be contrary to the object of the paper. It has been my Object to present these generalizations from my personal Observation and experience with the hope that they might excite discussion, and suggest to others, who, like myself, feel the limitations which clinical observation and morbid anatomy throw around our work, a method of study which may in their hands, with larger opportunities for observation and experiment, clear away some of the difficulties which now surround the study and treatment of diseased cerebro-spinal functioning.
