Global Vision Publishing House, 2012. Hardcover. Condition: New. In this book, Afro-Indian community (a vulnerable tribal group (PTG) of Gujarat), has been explored for their gender and health status from different perspectives. This study presents numerous vistas for those who are involved in environment, gender management and health in nine chapters. The very first chapter deals with introductory outline of the book. The second chapter explains geographical and demographic features while methodology and field work experiences is explained in the third chapter. The fourth chapter examines historical dimension of Afro-Indian communities and ethnographic profile is described in the fifth chapter. The sixth chapter explains socio-economic, environmental and gender characteristics of Afro-Indian community while traditional and modern dimensions of community health is discussed in the seventh chapter. The eighth chapter examines environmental management and gender health while last chapter gives conclusion of this study. Contents Preface (v) List of Abbreviations (vii) 1.
