Intensive Culture of Vegetables on the French System. With a Concise Monthly Calendar of Operations. CONTENTS include: . CHAPTER . PAGE . I .INTRODUCTION I LIST OF PLATES. Intensive Culture Vegetables. CHAPTER I. Introductory. Les récoltes se succèdent de six en six semaines et après chacune, l'homme retrouve sa terre aussi vaillante et aussi docile qu'auparavant. Parce qu'il lui est dévoué, il la possède comme personne ne la possédait jamais, comme jamais un amant ne possédait sa maîtresse. - La Cite Chinoise-G. Eng. Simon. Crops succeed one another every six weeks and after each the cultivator finds his soil as productive and as workable as before. Because he is devoted to it, he esteems it as no one ever esteemed it before, and as no gallant has ever esteemed his lady love. ONCE the meaning of this quotation is fully understood, it will give a fair idea of the spirit that should dominate the enthusiast in the intensive culture of vegetables. The cultivator must be devoted to and interested in his work and really love the land, the mother of all wealth and production and the most important asset at his disposal. The aim of this system is not so much what a crop will bring or what profit is to be derived, as to obtain from the land all that God wanted us to get from it for our welfare, livelihood, and happiness. In this mercenary age, the love of gain dominates all our actions. We are always calculating on the highest returns for the least exertion, and we are often led to believe that practice of a method is accompanied by big...
