Excerpt from Problems in Animal Metabolism: A Course of Lectures Given in the Physiological Laboratory of the London University at South Kensington in the Summer Term, 1904 The subject chosen for these lectures was, I think, sufficiently indicated in the title under Which they were announced. The underlying motive in current investigations is frequently the solution of problems which are not expressly formulated. Such problems are certainly not ripe for dogmatic treatment. But the lectures in the University Laboratory at South Kensington are intended for those students of medicine who have already had the opportunity of learning the essential facts in physiology. They are planned to foster in those studying the practice of medicine an interest in the efforts of others who study the theory, and to keep alive the faith that among the theories of to-day lie the foundations of the practice of to-morrow.
