But only the ones on the inside saw how destroyed her life would soon become. At the age of six she lost her mother, the only person who cared about her. Her mother taught her the most important thing that she could have taught her, and that was knowing her worth. After her mother died, the system took Tieara in because her father was unable to care for her. After bouncing around to multiple foster homes, she didn't feel comfortable until she was placed in the eighth one. She knew it was for her. They treated her as their own and gave her everything she could ever want. She was content, until future Kingpin Royal Cortez walked into her life and changed everything. He became her heart, moon, and sun. Everywhere she went he was never too far behind. But she forgot that with being in love, hurt is never too far away. Did she fall too fast? Will she be able to handle life with a kingpin? Will the secrets her mother left behind hinder her future with Royal? Will she be able to choose her sanity over Royal? What will she do if the sea of lies, secrets, hurt, and betrayal push her away from the love she has for Royal? When new people come in her life and starts to change her view on love, will she be able to tell the difference between love and lust?.
