Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from The Taxation of Organized Beneficence Standing within the precincts of this noble structure, surrounded not only by the men who guide the destinies of the Union Central but also by the traditions which always cluster about a really great human enterprise, I realize that congratulations from me, or from any one, to be adequate must represent something more than merely happily chosen words. The facts speak for themselves. Achievement stands all about us. Dreams have been made realities. Ideals have been nobly pursued and splendidly attained. Nothing that any of us says to-day can adequately describe the high purpose, the wise methods, the patient labors, and the moral steadfastness by which a life insurance organization has been here so administered that a great life insurance company has been built up. That such an institution exists is proof that a high purpose has ruled it, is proof that wise methods have been followed by it, and that patient labor has marked its whole existence; the Company itself is the rich reward of a moral steadfastness without which such success may not be achieved. Words, therefore, count for little, and for nothing unless they are sympathetically uttered. When I offer, in the name of the Company I have the honor to serve, sincere congratulations upon your entrance into this beautiful Home, I offer not merely words, but an appreciation born of intimate acquaintance with similar purposes, methods and labors, and a profound sympathy and daily experience with a like moral steadfastness.
